The Power Of Advertising.

The power of advertising is told by a manager of the toilet department of a large New York department store. "We have six different makes of one toilet article," he said, "and they are so near in quality that even experts can't tell the difference between them, yet we sell as much of one as we do of all the others together, just because the manager is everlastingly advertising it. The other five sell in proportion to the amount of advertising given to them. If there is any difference in quality, it is in favor of the poorest seller."—Los Angeles Times.

Cured Hemorrhages of the Lungs.

"Several years since my lungs were badly affected that I had hemorrhages," writes A. M. Ake, of Wood, Ind. I took treatment with several physicians without any benefit. I then started to take Foley's Honey and Tar, and my lungs are now as sound as a bullet. I recommend it in advanced stages of lung trouble."

Foley's Honey and Tar stops the cough and heals the lungs, and prevents serious results from a cold. Refuse substitutes. Bort & Co.

Advertising a Necessity.

In speaking about the obvious aids in store work a big merchant said the other day: "You ask me which I would sooner dispense with—the elevator, the telephone or the advertisement. They are so useful that I could hardly conceive of running my business without them. But the first two are hardly to be classed with the latter. They are conveniences—in fact, necessities in one sense—but the advertisement is an absolute necessity. When the world has made so much progress that we use wireless telegraphy from our store roof to communicate with 3,000 or 4,000 people every morning we may be able to dispense with advertising; but not before."—Quincy (Ill.) Herald.
